

In Paris for Fashion Week? Catch These 11 Must-See Exhibitions While You're There, by Karly Quadros, Cultured,
2 March 2026

CULTURED

ART THIS WEEK IN CULTURE

In Paris for Fashion Week? Catch These 11 Must-See Exhibitions While You're There

Take a break from the fashion circuit with Pop Art, porous sculptures, and resurrected mid-century studios.

---

Over the next nine days, Paris Fashion Week will draw the usual crowds to see sartorial heavyweights unveil their latest collections. For those looking to take a break from the commotion, there's always the city's galleries and museums. The crop of shows on view around Paris this March promise to transport you everywhere from Joseph Cornell's home-studio (by way of Wes Anderson's mind) to a high-octane tour through our warming world via the caustic lens of the late Martin Parr.

Alain Guiraudie, Sans titre, 2025. Image courtesy of the artist and Crèvecoeur.

“Alain Guiraudie”

Where: Crèvecoeur

When: Through March 28

Why It’s Worth a Look: Alain Guiraudie’s new series has one foot in the world of photography and one in the world of fiction. The elements presented here—a lush forest, a stone cottage, a man in a priest’s cassock, a nude man beside him—hint at a larger story about desire, refuge, and redemption. It’s up to the viewer to put those pieces together.

Know Before You Go: Better known as a filmmaker, Guiraudie won the Queer Palm and Un Certain Regard prize for Best Director at Cannes in 2013 for the now-cult Strangers by the Lake. In 2024, he rose to further prominence in the States with Misericordia.